HISTORICAL OUTLINE OF THE KREHBIELS

About the year 1500 a persecution of the Mennonites then known as Antabaptists broke out in Switzerland, they were imprisoned, tortured, even killed if they refused to renounce their faith. While some were fortunate to escape with their lives, it was impossible for many families to do so, hence a number of our forefathers were robbed, and murdered by fire, sword and water.

Charles Augustus Count of Nassau, who at a time ruled over Rheinfalz, was kind enough to extend religious tolerance to the persecuted; therefore, many of them left their native hills and settled in Rheinfalz, establishing many congregations, which still exist; even the French revolution being unable to destroy them.

Among these wanderers of whom we have knowledge was Jost Krehbiel our ancestor, in the year 1709 he purchased of Casper Scheerer the Leasehold Primmerhof in the district of Shippersfield. This property was owned by lords and came under the head Emphyteusis, passing from father to son. This property devastated during the ensuing thirty years of war, but through the diligence and thrift of our forefathers it was put into good shape again.

Jost Krehbiel had six children: Johann, Jacob, Anna Maria, Anna Katarina, Christian and Anna. Jost Krehbiel, Sr. died in 1722, his widow petitioned the Count to divide the Primmerhof into two parts. Under date of November 18, 1723. she received a new deed signed by Charles Augustus-Count of Nassau. She never remarried.

Johann oldest son of Jost Krehbiel did not apply for an inheritance leasehold until December 18, 1756, when he received a deed to himself and wife Susanna from the Count of Nassau.

No registry can be found of the dates of their deaths. Their children were Peter, Johann, Jacob, Michiel, Anna, Magdalena and Maria. Peter bought a Manor in Ruppert a few miles distant from Primmerhof but left this place with others from the neighborhood and traveled to Lemburg, Austria, about the year 1770. Johann Krehbiel, son of Jacob Krehbiel of Klaushof, emigrated to America to the state of Pennsylvania in 1792.

In 1831 Johann Krehbiel, married to Magdalena (Wurz), came to America, he settled in New York state. He was the son of Jacob and Maria (Gram). In 1833 Christian and his wife, Anna (Kreidig), and his brother Johannes and his wife, Anna (Vohlgamut), came over. They were the sons of Jacob and Maria (Jotter).

In 1839 his brother, Joseph, and Katarient (Hertzler) his wife, came to the state of Ohio. Later in 1850 Johannes and his wife, Katarena (Krehbiel), came. They settled in Iowa. A few years later Jacob II and his wife, Marie (Vohlgamut), and Daniel and his wife, Maria (Leisy), and their families came over. Jacob settled in Iowa where his brother, Johannes, was; while Daniel went to Ohio. They were the sons of Jacob and Elizabeth (Kaegy).

Peter Krehbiel took possession of land in Lemberg, Austria, and carried on agriculture for fifteen years, then moved into Russia with several other families into Tschernigoff. Here was located a brotherhood called Reditsoff. After a stay of four years they concluded to go farther, settling in the town of Milchalin Gov. Kiev. They remained here for three years moving thence to Wohlhynien to the town of Bresina, near Dubno. Here they stayed eight years.

A congregation was established here of which the four families, Krehbiel, Zerger, Mueller and Schrag, became members. Peter Krehbiel had eight children: Christian, Peter, Johann, Heinrich, Michiel, Marie, Susan, and Magdalena, who together with the families, Schrag, Mueller, and Zerger, settled in Edwardsdorf.

The move to Russian domain was probably determined by the invitation of Catherine II of Russia to Mennonite farmers in an effort to colonize and settle portions of Poland and the Volga Province, most of all it held the promise which these people were seeking, the absolute immunity from military service, guaranteed them for a period of one hundred years.

The conditions in Russia gradually changed and various promises previously made were withdrawn. By 1870 the threat of repudiation of the right of freedom of conscience in the matter of military service was so imminent that plans were again made for migration. The exodus that took a large number of our Mennonites out of Russia took place in 1874 and included such names as Krehbiel, Zerger, Ries, Stucky, and many others.

Looking back over a period of over seventy-five years, during which time we have been privileged to enjoy the blessings of complete freedom of conscience, we must feel a great and compelling debt of gratitude to our forefathers for their faith and courage in leaving their homes for a new land. Above all must we be grateful to our Heavenly Father for his loving care and protection in bringing us this far.

Jacob M. and Anna (Graber) Goering.

HISTORY OF THE SWISS MENNONITES

(Taken from an address given by J. J. Krehbiel on October 19 at the fiftieth anniversary celebration of the Swiss-Mennonite immigration to America.)

This you can readily realize is a difficult topic as we have but very few written records regarding our forefathers. Personal conversations and a few old church records form the basis of this theme.

About 1500 of our forefathers, then known as Anabaptists lived in the Canton Bern of Switzerland. At that time church and state united in a terrible persecution. Spies traced them to their hiding places, officers were offered prizes for their capture and they were forced to acknowledge the State Church, baptize their children or be imprisoned, burned at the stake or driven out of the country.

As the bands in the Neiderland (Germany) heard of the need of their fellows; they sent a delegation to Switzerland to investigate and, if possible, help them. They sought relief through the officers of the State, but got no hearing, and were even forbidden to give the Anabaptists financial aid.

Realizing that no aid was to be had from the Swiss federation, the delegation turned to the Count von Neiderland. The Count sent a note to the Swiss State pleading that mercy be shown the conscientious, thrifty, and industrious Anabaptists. The answer was, however, to the effect that no concessions would be made. The Anabaptists would simply not be tolerated so their lot became worse and worse.

In 1670 Karl August of Nausau, in the Reinpfalz, ruled in Churfirst. The thirty years war had devastated his provinces, whole villages having been depopulated because of war and famine. The Count was anxious to have these villages re-populated. He knew the Anabaptists were very industrious and thrifty so he sent them an invitation to immigrate to Reinpfalz. About one hundred families responded.

Among the persecuted was our forefather, Jost Crayenbuhl, who lived at Cezwill on the river Oar in the Canton Bern. He was a leader in the church and was among those who were imprisoned where he suffered untold hardships, but finally was released. But a lingering sickness contracted in prison brought his life to a terrible close.

Jost Crayenbuhl had three sons: Jost, Peter and Michael, who were with the one hundred families that left Canton Bern for Reinpfalz. It was a sad journey—men, women and children—old men between 89 and 90 years, bereft of earthly possessions and weakened by persecution and need—on foot—leaving their beloved homes and seeking shelter in a strange land.

This was the beginning of the exodus from the Swiss cantons.

It seemed for a time that conditions became more tolerable in the Swiss cantons after these families left, but soon persecutions started anew and conditions became worse than ever. One group after another migrated. Among them were the following families: Graber, Stucky and Kaufman. They migrated to Montlelard, France. Some descendants of these families live there today.

During the reign of Catherine II of Russia boundaries of Russia were extended to the Caspian and Black Seas. This region was sparsely inhabited by half civilized Turks and Tartars. Desiring a more civilized and thrifty class of subjects, the Czarina invited the inhabitants of Germany and North Europe to settle within her domain. Promised freedom of religion, freedom from military service, no taxes for ten years, etc. were among the inducements offered.

Our great great grandfather, Peter Krehbiel, was among those who left the Reinphalz in the year of 1773 for Austria, where he lived for fourteen years. The four families, Regier, Krehbiel, Miller, and Schrag, moved farther east to Ridilschaff where they lived four years. Michelin was their next stopping place. The Nickel and Wedel families made their appearances here. Then Borisina at Dubno and Wignenky became their homes.

We will next go back to Mempelgard, France, where the Graber, Stucky, Kaufman, etc., families had already settled. In 1790 some of these families left France for Urschulin and Einsiedel, Poland. In 1797 those who settled at Einsiedel, Poland, moved to Michelsdorf at Warsaw and those from Urschulin to Michelin. The following families settled at Urschulin and Micheldorf: Albrecht, Bartel, Flickinger, Graber, Goering, Gordon, Hahn, Hettlinger, Kaufman, Bauer, Mendellin, Rupp, Ratzlaff, Roth, Sutter, Stanton, Schrag and Zuk. Also several Lutheran families joined our group—Senner, Schwarts and an orphan by the name of Paul Voran was adopted and brought up by one of our families.

In 1817 a church was established at Edwardorf.

In 1837 a church was established at Korodescht. Shortly thereafter one at Waldheim. In 1861 one at Kohnsdrke. In 1874 the great immigration to America was begun.

FOREWORD

We wish to thank all, for any help given us to make this book possible, for without that we could not have done this job. Especially we want to thank the descendants of the late J. J. Krehbiel for the splendid records their father made. They are a treasure which should be preserved with the utmost care for future reference, for without them family records such as this would be almost impossible to make.

Sure there are mistakes, some of them made by you in not giving us the correct information, or in not answering and therefore not completing your record, some of them made by us for which we are sorry.

In paging hundreds of names and dates there are bound to be errors and again we say, "So sorry."

May this book help preserve your family history and strengthen your family ties.

Jacob M. and Anna J. (Graber) Goering.

Note: Jacob's first wife was a sister of Fredrick Strausz father of Jacob Strausz, Sr., who lived at Moundridge, Kansas.

It may also be of interest to note that Freni, Jacob's second wife, was a sister of Joseph Schrag who married Barbara Graber. From this lineage comes the Emmerts-Mishler, Shenk and Wolfers.

They moved to Oregon and about 45 families are living there now, most of them are loggers by trade.

They are all listed in detail in the "Peter Graber" family record. There were 11 children born to the Joseph Schrags of which 7 died in infancy.

This Joseph Schrag was an uncle to Jacob and Johann Krehbiel. They and the women of the above four listed were first cousins.
